Robert R. McCormick Museum

Experience fine country living of the 1930s through the 1950s as you tour the Robert R. McCormick Museum, the historic home of Col. Robert R. McCormick, former editor and publisher of the Chicago Tribune. Your tour will explore McCormick's life, legacy and impact on Wheaton, Chicagoland, and the United States. Visits by guided tour; schedules available in the Visitors Center or at the Museum.

First Division Museum at Cantigny

In the middle of a beautiful park, about as far removed from fighting and war as a visitor can imagine, we are pleased to have one of the finest military museums in the country. Located on a wooded site in the midst of Cantigny Park, the First Division Museum is visited by over 110,000 people each year and is known for its realistic exhibits and immersing galleries.

Cantigny Green Team

Cantigny has been taking eco-friendly steps for more than 20 years. In 2007, a group of environmentally-conscious employees established a green team to strengthen Cantigny's greening efforts. The results have been immense with an all-employee environmental training program, more robust recycling and Cantigny has even switched to corn-based disposable products and eco-friendly cleaning supplies. On March 25, 2008 our accomplishments were recognized by DuPage County when they presented us with an Earth flag representing the positive changes we are making for the health of our community and our planet.

Did you know?

- Cantigny is pronounced Can-teé-nee
- Cantigny covers over 500 acres and contains award winning gardens, 27 holes of golf and world class museums
- The original name of the estate was Red Oak Farm and it was a working farm used as the summer home of Col. Robert R. McCormick
- Cyrus McCormick, inventor of the reaper, was the great-uncle of Col. Robert R. McCormick
- Cantigny green houses grow more than 200,000 plants every year
- The area currently used for golf was formerly used for fox hunts (that's why you passed a fox hunter topiary on your way into the course)
- Located just outside the First Division Museum, Cantigny's Tank Park is home to 11 historic tanks on permanent display
- Scenes from the movie A League of Their Own were filmed at the Robert R. McCormick Museum
